

LIFE IN THE METROPOLIS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY THE SUN'S REPORTERS.

"Paris in New York" was painted all over two advertising vans that stood at the entrance of the Metropolitan Concert Hall for an evening while guests were thronging into the double doorway to attend the eighth annual masquerade ball of the Société Française de l'Amitié. At 11 o'clock there were fewer persons present than there were at the same stage of last year's ball, but at there was a rush at midnight that blocked the doorway and set Joe "L'Ami-é" "bizzed" at the head of the haughty decorations were simple and artistic. Great streamers hung in festoons from the central point in the ceiling to shields arranged along the face of the galleries. Each shield had a clown's head and was surrounded by small tri-

A Missing Youth.
Charles Starr, aged 17, of 251 West Thirtieth street, has been missing for several nights. He is a steady young man, and was well thought of by his employers, a John street engraver. The most careful inquiry made by the police can discover no trace of the boy nor the slightest reason for his voluntary absence. He is five feet six inches tall, weighs 140 lbs., with dark hair and eyes and wears a dark coat and vest, unbuttoned, light blue or white shirt, and a seamen cap.

Commissioner Thompson's Gallantry.
The Grand Jury summoned Commissioner of Public Works Herbert Thompson before them yesterday to ask his views as to partitioning off a part of the ante-room of the Grand Jury for the accommodation of women witnesses. The Commissioner not only offered

The Illness of Ada Cavendish.
Miss Ada Cavendish was attacked, with pneumonia, in Nashville, Tenn., ten days ago. Her traveling companion, Mr. C. J. C. returned to this city, where she is now convalescing in the New York Hotel. The members of the company were left without entertainment in the middle of the season, and far from their homes.

Signal Office Prediction.
Slowly rising temperature, southwest to northwest wind, with light to moderate breeze, and clear to partly cloudy sky, desired in the southern portions and falling barometer during the day.

Very plain, the Supreme Court, the highest judicial authority in the United States, has ruled that the federal government has no right to search the homes of private citizens without a warrant. The ruling, which was handed down by a 5-4 vote, was a landmark decision in the history of the Fourth Amendment, which guarantees the right to privacy. The ruling was a victory for the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), which had filed a lawsuit against the government in 1987. The lawsuit was brought by a man named John Doe, who had been arrested and searched without a warrant. The ACLU argued that the search was unconstitutional. The Supreme Court ruled in favor of the ACLU, stating that the government's search of Doe's home was a violation of the Fourth Amendment. The ruling was a significant victory for the ACLU and for the right to privacy. It also means that the government cannot search the homes of private citizens without a warrant, even if it has a strong suspicion that they are involved in a crime. This ruling is a landmark decision in the history of the Fourth Amendment and will have a lasting impact on the rights of private citizens.
